Crisis Policy Protocol

Crisis Policy Protocol

Overview

Issue Statement:

In crises, Meta assesses on and off-platform risks of imminent harm, responding with targeted policy and product actions. To strengthen and complement existing work, the Crisis Policy Protocol will codify our policy-specific responses to ensure we are more timely, systematic and proportionate in a crisis. We seek to balance a consistent global response with the flexibility to adapt to quickly changing conditions.

Working Groups: 6

External Engagements: 54

Examples of Relevant 2021 Crises

Research and External Engagement

Research

- The academic and advocacy literature provides no consistent definition of what constitutes a crisis, nor agreement on the best way to describe their severity.
 - However, general signals are identified in existing frameworks. These may include, for example: the number of people affected by a crisis; the geographic scope of a crisis; or level of media attention, among others.
- On-platform signals may not be the only reliable indicators that a crisis is occurring.

External Engagement

- Stakeholders expressed concerns in two main areas:
 - Over/under enforcement
 - Balancing consistency and flexibility that takes context into account.
- Examples of entry and exit criteria suggested by stakeholders include:
 - Entry: Political events, violent language, false news reports, etc.
 - Exit: Decrease in violence, return of civil infrastructure, political settlement, etc.
- Stakeholders urged Meta to employ a holistic and widely applicable criteria when designating a crisis.

Crisis Policy Protocol

Core Objectives

Principled

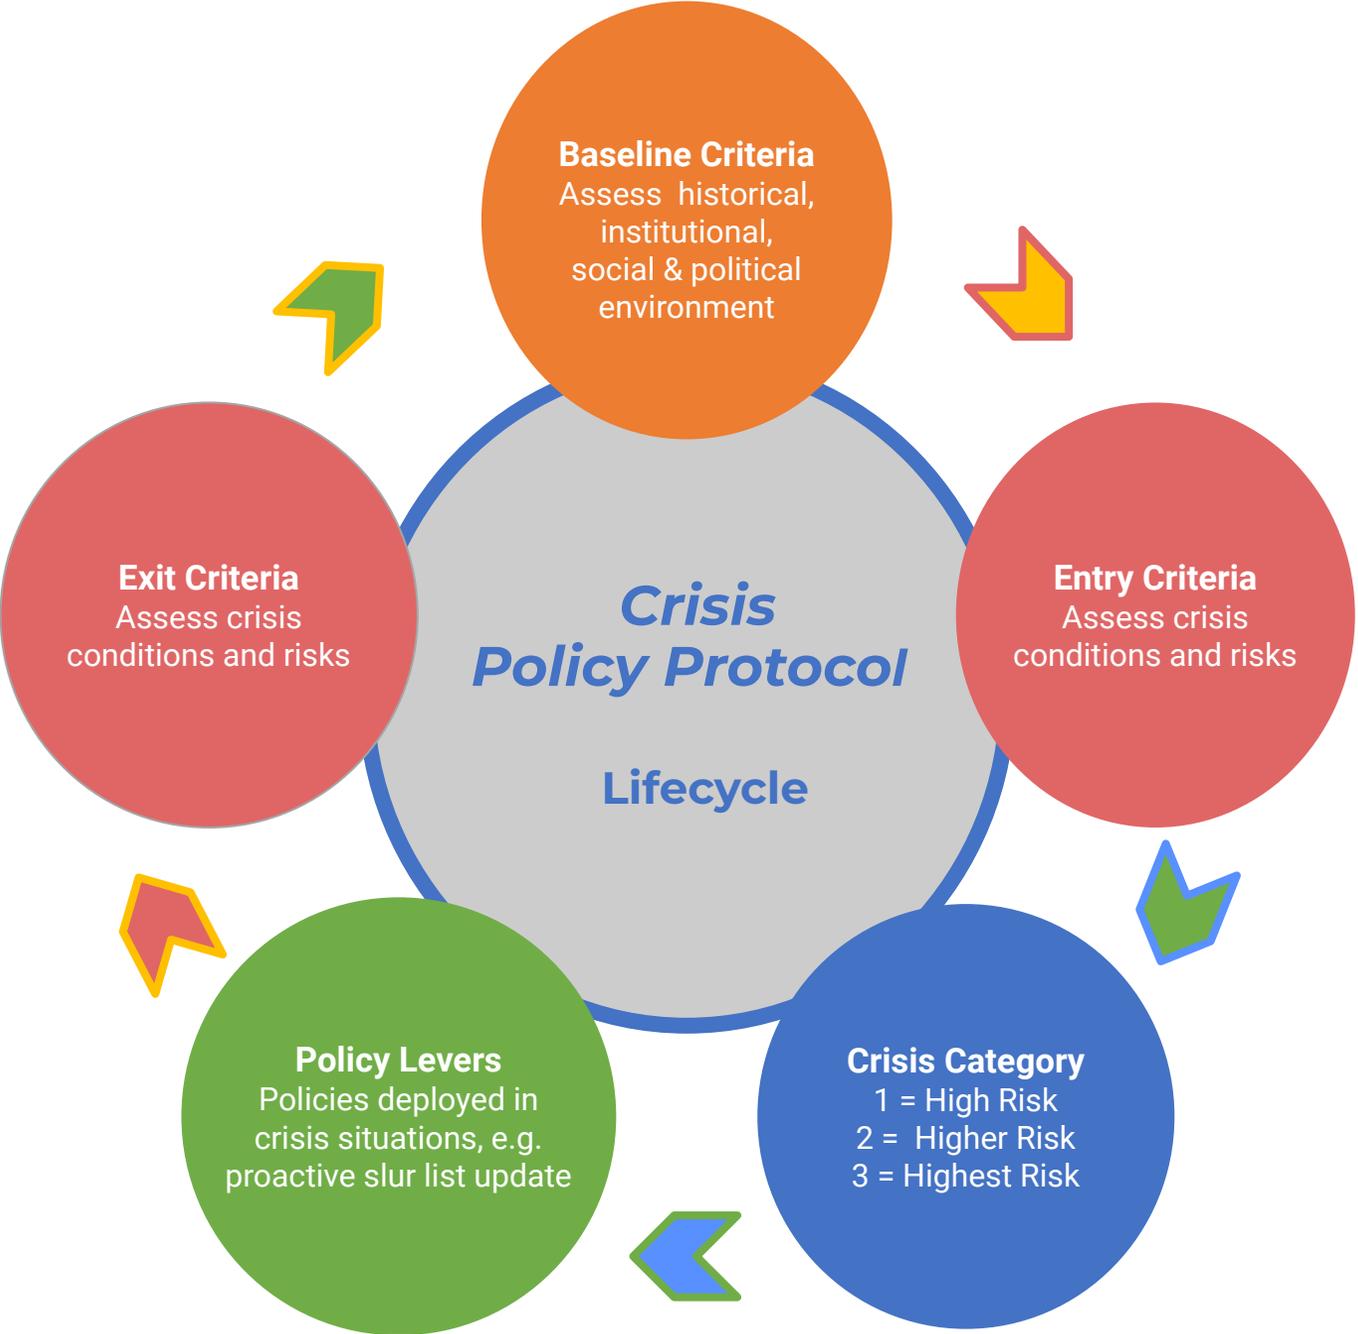

Codify a policy response that is global, consistent, and adaptable.

Calibrated

Ensure the policy response is context-specific, timely, anticipates risks, and is informed by past crises.

Sustainable

Policy response is fully aligned with cross-company crisis frameworks & resources.
